comment re: Santa Fe Mountains Landscape Resiliency Project

Respected forest service: Regarding the Santa Fe Mountains Landscape Resiliency Project, what is the rush? We live on the near eastern border of the intended burn and thinning area near Canoncito. I have had no information on how to comment until just today. Where is the study information and environmental impact statement. When and what and how is this process going to affect us and our neighbors? And the longer term geo-meteorological cycles? We need information on the actual assessment and analysis of the proposed forest reduction process. I know this process is the latest popular "scientific" method but there are many other studied science opinions and methods. Let us all work out what is best for our specific location and conditions. Thank you. Lauri Hakola
