Santa Fe Mountains Landscape Resiliency Project

The project named above, slated for our local Sangre de Cristo Mountains, is to cut down most trees and shrubs across up to 33 square miles and set prescribed fires across up to 67 square miles. This is not wise as it will exacerbate the problem, not fix it. We should be planting, not destroying trees. It is essential that an Environmental Impact Study that is site-specific be done before this misguided plan launches in October. Further, the public is fed up with FS's lack of transparency around plans such as these. This is something that affects all of us who live here and outdated thinking about forestry and not alerting us will just not do.
