Fwd: Santa Fe Mountains Landscape Resiliency Project

This is to express great opposition to the Forest Service plan to drastically thin 1,800 acres in the Hyde Memorial State Park and Pacheco Canyon areas. The Forest Service's future plans to thin thousands of acres in the Sangre de Christos mountains will take millions of trees at a time when our trees are more important than ever because of climate change. A recent study indicates our best path to stem off climate change is planting trees, and an end to deforestation. The Forest Service is exacerbating the greatest problem of our time, and simultaneously destroying the natural beauty of our region. Please get an EIS (Environmental Study Impact) done with site specific analysis.

Thank you,
Tricia Monaghan
