proposed forest resiliency plan

To whom it may concern,

I attended both Santa Fe public meetings about this proposal which includes large tracts of tree thinning and prescribed burns. I want to voice my very strong concern about, and even stronger opposition to this proposal. At a time when others are proposing reducing carbon dioxide through the planting of one trillion trees globally, I just can't see the intelligence of doing just the opposite to our Santa Fe forests. What is the Forest Service thinking? Or, are they?

Sincerely,

Robb Foster
